THE MUSE MANSION (site)

Formerly located at the intersection of Muse and Academy Streets, where the Citgo gas station stands today, was the Muse Mansion, built by Dr. Joseph E. Muse in 1825. It was a large and handsome three story brick building of symmetrical design, with an arcaded porch across the front between two gabled end wings. The house was later converted into a private school for girls known as the Cambridge Female Jeminary. In 1892, it became part of the public school system and served as the high school until 1930, and was then used for the 6th and 7th grades. The building was burned down in 1955.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

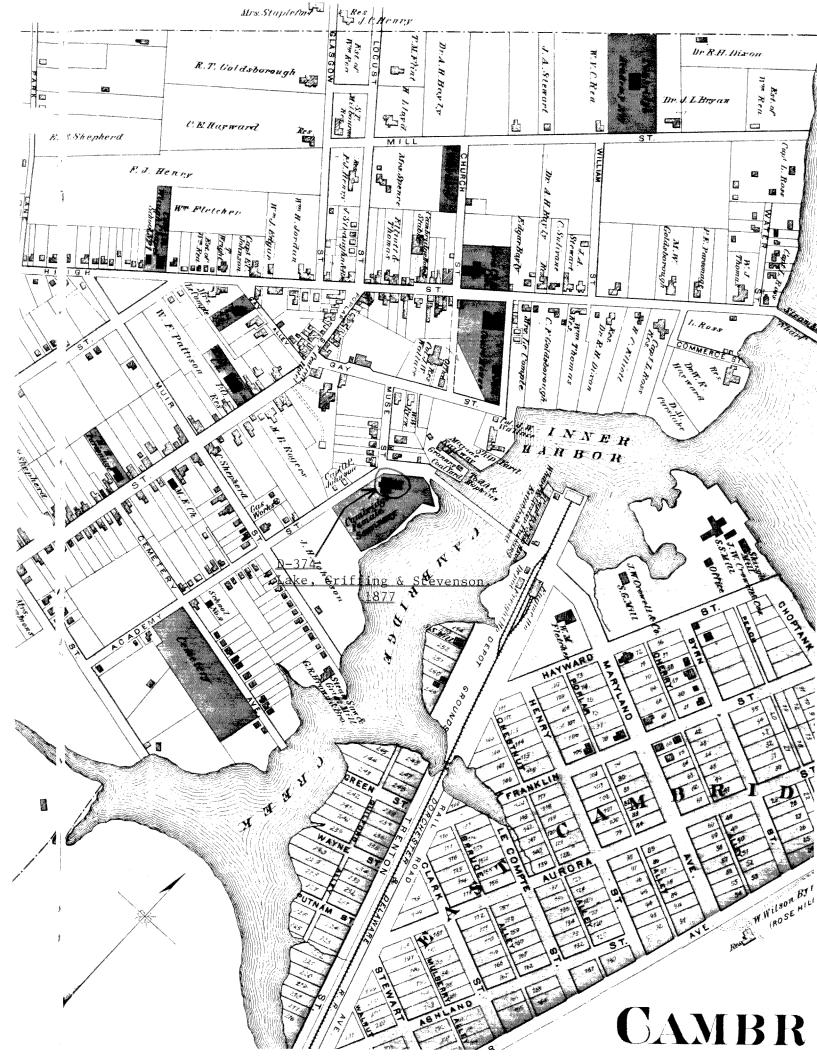

History:

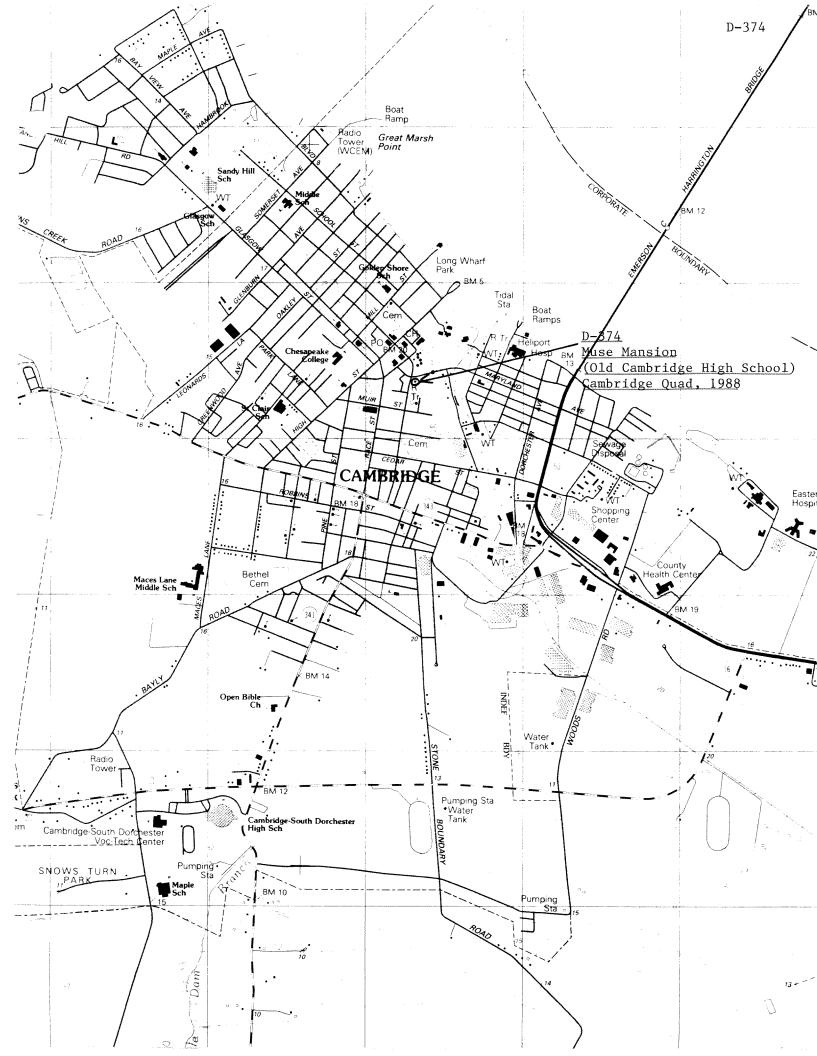

This structure, formerly at the head of Muse Street where the Citgo gas station is located today, was originally built as a private dwelling. then converted into a private school for young ladies and finally became part of the Dorchester County public school system. The tract of land upon which the school stood was owned in early colonial days by John Kirk, who at that time owned a great deal of land that is now the City of Cambridge. In 1722, John Kirk sold to Thomas Nevitt a tract of land that included the school A large part of the Nevitt tract was bought grounds. by Robert Muir, after whose family, the nearby Muir Street was named. Evidently he divided part of the property into lots, as the tract seems to have been sold off in small parcels. On January 12, 1803, Joseph Muse purchased from Robert Muir, a tract of land bordering Cambridge Creek. In 1825, Dr. Joseph E. Muse erected the Muse Mansion, the site of the dwelling being on a high piece of land that sloped to the creek.

In 1852, the property was bought by Judge Charles Goldsborough and in 1858 it passed into other hands. Shortly thereafter it became a private school for young ladies called the Cambridge Female Seminary. Classes were held on the first and second floors, the third floor being used as a dormitory. In 1892, the school became a part of the public school system. Both Governor Emerson C. Harrington and U. S. Senator George L. Radcliffe were once principals of the school. It served as the high school until 1930 and was then used for the 6th and 7th grades. The building was burned on January 16, 1955.

In 1896, the original Cambridge Academy was located on the west corner of Mill and School streets. On Monday afternoon, December 14, 1902, fire destroyed the building; there were three hundred students enrolled in the school, and all were evacuated safely. From the author's collection

After the fire of 1902, the school at the corner of Mill and School streets was rebuilt and became known as Academy School. Mrs. Ella Todd's third grade class posed for this picture about 1914. The old Seminary School building faced the intersection of Academy, Muse, and Market streets. Built as a private residence by Dr. James Muse in 1825, it became the Cambridge Female Academy; later, after a merger, it became the Cambridge High School. In 1904, the school was remodeled at a cost of sixteen thousand dollars; ceilings in the building were metal and the building was heated throughout by steam. In 1929 a new high school was opened on School Street.

Col. Albanus Phillips purchased the grounds and the building, and on June 18, 1942, he allowed the office of Price Administration to open its Eastern Shore headquarters in the building. Courtesy of Morley Jull collection

On January 16, 1955, under the supervision of Chief Brice G. Kinnamon, First Assistant Chief Mitchell Gould, and Second Assistant Chief Robert Brooks, the Seminary Building was burned for experimental and training purposes. Firemen from the Neck District, Lakes and Straits, Church Creek, Hurlock, Secretary, East New Market, Easton, and Trappe fire companies observed the fire. In five hours the building was burned and the walls were down. Photograph by A. Russell Tregoe; courtesy of Mrs. A. Russell Tregoe
